A Swedish baby and a Dala pony,
So excited for the day

When we can be forever friends
And then together we can play!

You grow in mommy's tummy,
so very safely tucked away

And I am just a little pony,
carved from wood, or so they say

Baby and pony, so tiny and sweet,
Such special friends with cute little feet.

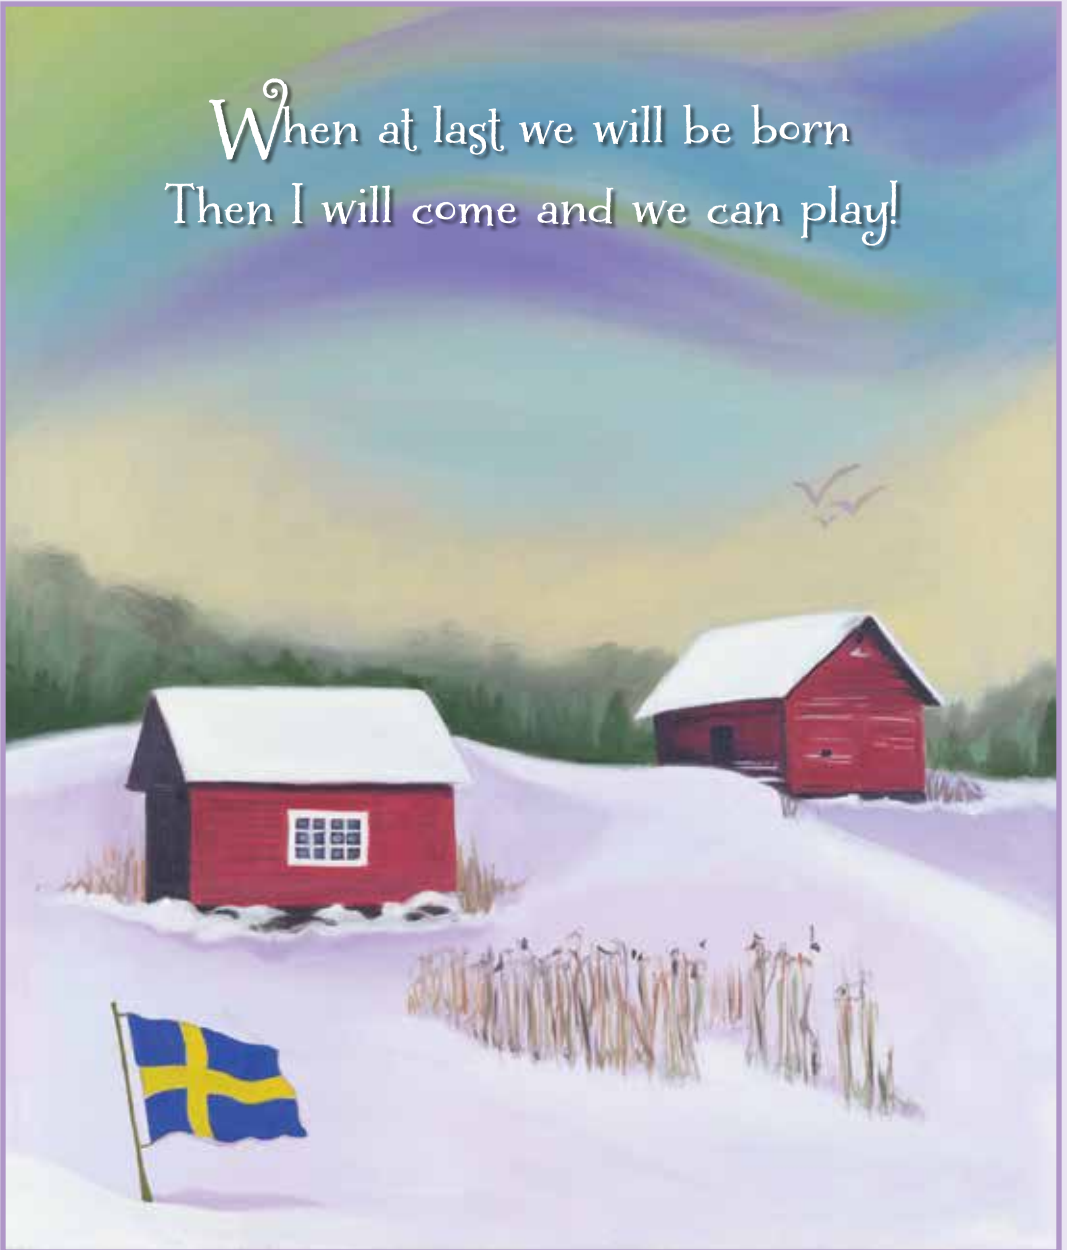

We dream of snuggles and as we grow,
We practice cuddles to say hello.

You in Colorado and me in Sweden,
Both of us waiting for the day

When at last we will be born
Then I will come and we can play!

Swedish SwedeHearts® we will be,
Growing together so happily.
To snuggle and cuddle
and laugh all day,
Forever together,
we can play!

The Dala Horse

A Dalecarlian horse or Dala horse (Swedish: Dalahäst) is a traditional carved, painted wooden horse statuette originating in Swedish province Dalarna.

In the old days the Dala horse was mostly used as a toy for children. In modern times it has become a symbol of Dalarna, as well as Sweden in general. Several different types of Dala horses are made, with distinguishing features common to the locality where they are produced.

One particular style has become much more common and widespread than others. It is stoutly carved and painted bright red with details and a harness in white, green, yellow and blue.
